LANGUAGE IN THE NEWS

1 As readers of
2 newspapers, and viewers of 3 television, we readily assume
4 that the Nine O`Clock News,
5 or the front page of the *Daily
Express* or the Guardian,
6 consists of faithful reports of 7 events that happened ‘out
8 there’, in the world beyond
9 our immediate experience.
10 At a certain level, that is of 11 course a realistic assumption:
12 real events do occur and are 13 reported – a coach crashes on
14 the autobahn, a postman
15 wins the pools, a cabinet
16 minister resigns. But real
17 events are subject to 18 conventional processes of 19 selection: they are not 20 intrinsically newsworthy, but 21 only become ‘news’ when 22 selected for inclusion in 23 news reports. The vast 24 majority of events are not
25 mentioned, and so selection
26 immediately gives us a
27 partial view of the world. We 28 know also that different
29 newspapers report
30 differently, in both content
31 and presentation.

33 The pools win is 34 more likely to be reported in 35 the Mirror than in The Times, whereas a crop failure
37 in Meghalaya may be 38 reported in The Times but 39 almost certainly not in the 40 Mirror. Selection is 41 accompanied by
42 transformation, differential
43 treatment in presentation
44 according to numerous
45 political, social and
46 economic factors.
47 As far as differences
48 in presentation are
49 concerned, most people
50 would admit the possibility
51 of ‘bias’: the Sun is known to 52 be consistently hostile in its 53 treatment of trades unions,
54 and of what it calls ‘the 55 loony Left’; the Guardian is 56 generous in its reporting of 57 the affairs of the Campaign
58 for Nuclear Disarmament.
59 Such disaffections and 60 affiliations are obvious when 61 you start reading carefully,
62 and discussing the news
63 media with other people. The 64 world of the Press is not the

65 real world, but a world
66 skewed and judged.
67 Now what attitude
68 might one take towards the 69 ‘bias’? There is an argument
70 to the effect that biases do
71 exist, but not everywhere.
72 The Daily Express is biased,
73 the Socialist Worker is not
74 (or the other way round). In a
75 good world, all newspapers
76 and television channels
77 would report the unmediated
78 truth. This view seems to me
79 to be drastically and 80 dangerously false. It allows a
81 person to believe, and to 82 assert, complacently, that
83 their newspaper is unbiased,
84 whereas all the others are in 85 the pockets of the Tories or 86 the Trotskyites; or that 87 newspapers are biased, while 88 TV news is not (because ‘the 89 camera cannot lie’).
90 The danger with this 91 position is that it assumes the 92 possibility of genuine
93 neutrality, of some news
94 medium being a clear
95 undistorting window. And 96 that can never be.

Somos todos culpables de la ruina del planeta

La salud del mundo está hecha un asco. “Somos todos responsables”, claman las voces de la alarma universal, y la generalización absuelve: si somos todos responsables, nadie es.

Como conejos se reproducen los nuevos tecnócratas del medio ambiente. Es la tasa de natalidad más alta del mundo: los expertos generan expertos y más expertos que se ocupan de envolver el tema en el papel celofán de la ambigüedad. Ellos fabrican el brumoso lenguaje de las exhortaciones al “sacrificio de todos” en las declaraciones de los gobiernos y en los solemnes acuerdos internacionales que nadie cumple. Estas cataratas de palabras, inundación que amenaza convertirse en una catástrofe ecológica comparable al agujero de ozono, no se desencadenan gratuitamente. El lenguaje oficial ahoga la realidad para otorgar impunidad a la sociedad de consumo, a quienes la imponen por modelo en nombre del desarrollo y a las grandes empresas que le sacan el jugo.

Pero las estadísticas confiesan. Los datos ocultos bajo el palabrerío revelan que el veinte por ciento de la humanidad comete el ochenta por ciento de agresiones contra la naturaleza, crimen que los asesinos llaman suicidio, y es la humanidad entera quien paga las consecuencias de la degradación de la tierra, la intoxicación del aire, el envenenamiento del agua, el enloquecimiento del clima y la dilapidación de los recursos naturales no renovables.

La señora Harlem Bruntland, que encabeza el gobierno de Noruega, comprobó recientemente que “si los siete mil millones de probadores del planeta consumieran lo mismo que los países desarrollados de Occidente, harían falta diez planetas como el nuestro para satisfacer todas sus necesidades”. Una experiencia imposible. Pero los gobernantes de los países del sur que prometen el ingreso al Primer Mundo, mágico pasaporte que nos hará a todos ricos y felices, no sólo deberían ser procesados por estafa. No sólo nos están tomando el pelo, no: además, esos gobernantes están cometiendo el delito de apología del crimen. Porque ese sistema de vida que se ofrece como paraíso, fundado en la explotación del prójimo y en la aniquilación de la naturaleza, es el que nos está enfermando el cuerpo, nos está envenenando el alma y nos está dejando sin mundo. Extirpación del comunismo, implantación del consumismo: la operación ha sido un éxito, pero el paciente se está muriendo.

Texto 2

Su majestad el precio

Por Tomás Domínguez

El actual mundo de los negocios, un encargado de compras que adquiera un producto de mayor calidad a un precio un poco más elevado deberá pasar por la incomodidad de explicar a sus superiores la razón de tal decisión, mientras que inclinándose por el mejor precio, aun a sabiendas de que la calidad es menor, lo más probable es que nadie se dé por enterado. En última instancia, siempre queda la posibilidad de rechazar la partida si la misma no se ajusta a los niveles mínimos requeridos. Se podrá argumentar que este sistema de compras privilegia la mediocridad, pero lamentablemente nuestra función no consiste en filosofar sino en vender, y éas son las reglas del juego. Por otra parte, exacerbar la competencia, a largo plazo, obliga a los proveedores a mejorar sus productos, así lo dice la teoría y así se cumple en la práctica.

Sin embargo, hoy el cliente sabe lo más relevante del negocio: nuestro precio y el de nuestra competencia, mientras que nosotros sólo conocemos nuestra cotización. El fax de trescientos dólares logró el milagro: el cliente accedió cómodamente a los ansiados tres presupuestos, los proveedores nos transformamos en apenas un poquito más que un número telefónico, y el precio pasó a ser el dato más relevante de todas las transacciones.

Con algo más de dinero, los computadores personales simplificaron nuestras vidas desde el punto de vista técnico, pero pusieron en manos de los clientes muchas de nuestras armas más valiosas. En materia de diseño está pasando algo parecido a lo ocurrido años atrás con la fotografía. El profesional debe aprender a convivir con el amateur y con el amateur que se cree profesional, o con el amateur que es hijo o sobrino o vecino o vaya a saber qué de uno de nuestros principales clientes y, en consecuencia, pasa a tener la llave mágica de su cuenta.

Y como no hay dos sin tres, el rosario nos tiene reservada una nueva perla para los años venideros. En Estados Unidos ya hay empresas que archivaron el fax y los famosos tres presupuestos para la compra de sus insumos. ¿Por qué resignarse con una competencia tan modesta, cuando es posible abrir la misma a todo el mundo por Internet? Pronto usted tendrá la oportunidad de competir en las más diversas licitaciones, habrá bolsas de compras en tiempo real y el mercado nominal de sus negocios crecerá en forma exponencial. Claro que su mercado real, el que hoy le compra, instrumentará sistemas más abiertos de búsqueda de proveedores y, usted ya lo intuye, los precios volverán a bajar.

Comprenderá, como conclusión de todo esto, que sus angustias son compartidas por muchas personas en todo el planeta y que lo importante es saber que las reglas del juego han cambiado y debemos adaptarnos a ellas o resignarnos a la desaparición de nuestras empresas.
